

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We would first like to express our tremendous thanks and appreciation to the families, educators, and administrators (our proximity experts) that helped launch this effort by sharing their experiences and futuristic thinking. We are grateful for their trust, time, and expertise. Their ability to (we)envision a more effective and equitable child care system while simultaneously navigating the current system (even during a global health pandemic) drives this initiative and deepens our commitment to making the ideal real.

These original proximity experts were able to share their expertise because the Catapult Design team earned their trust and provided a wide array of human-centered design tools to gather their data and insights.

Next, we offer our thanks to the many ECE professionals and influencers who provided feedback and added their insights to WeVision EarlyEd at conferences and gatherings across the country. (See Appendix B for a complete list of the conferences and meetings attended from late 2022 through 2024.)

We acknowledge the staff at the Bainum Family Foundation who shaped this work. From inception to launch, they provided the strategic thinking and project management needed to make this initiative possible. This includes members of our Early Childhood team.

Systems-change work requires autonomy, ambiguity, and agility. We are grateful to the Bainum Family Foundation Board of Directors for supporting this important work and creating the conditions required to deeply engage in reimagining child care and mobilizing proximity experts and other stakeholders around the necessary change.

Finally, thank you to the consultants who worked behind the scenes to bring forward the expertise and lived experiences of families, educators, and administrators.
